

Professional Qualifications of Grayce Garthoeffner

Grayce serves as a Junior Analyst at Anchor Business Valuations & Financial Services, where she contributes to both analytical and written components of the firm's work. In her role, she supports valuation engagements through detailed research of private and public companies, helping to develop relevant comparative data used in report preparation. She is also actively involved in the drafting and review of valuation reports, ensuring clarity, consistency, and accuracy in written deliverables. In addition to report work, Grayce contributes to thought leadership efforts at Anchor by assisting with the drafting and editing of articles on technical valuation topics, further supporting the firm's external communications and professional presence.

Grayce's strong research and writing capabilities make her a valuable part of the team, particularly in synthesizing complex information into clear, well-supported narratives. She has worked with Anchor for approximately three years, balancing her responsibilities with her academic commitments, and continues to contribute on a part-time basis during the school year. Her familiarity with the firm's processes and standards allows her to operate efficiently and add value across multiple aspects of engagement and content development.

Grayce is currently a student at Cornell University, pursuing a Bachelor of Science in Environment and Sustainability.
